“Enamel Therapy: The Next Generation of Care”

The dental professional is currently recognizing the need to implement an effective protocol in the appropriate assessment, identification and management of dental caries.

A learning process now exists to make significant changes in evidence-based, individualized care. The patient demographics regarding dental caries have shifted to include all age groups. As a result, the choice of therapy reflects a need to utilize non-invasive technology to improve our ability to detect and control the caries process.

This program will encourage the dental team to utilize effective surveys to classify a sound direction in patient education, enamel therapy, and lifelong prevention steps.

The latest ACP and ACP-driven technologies will be reviewed and discussed for the role they play in protecting the hard and soft structures of the oral cavity. Additionally, the participant will gain a better understanding of the synergistic effects that ACP has in fluoride uptake.

“Got Evidence?”

Understanding Evidence Based Rational for Periodontal Therapy”

Clinical evidence is changing the way we treat periodontal disease. This presentation will review current research on periodontal disease and the clinical benefits of comprehensive treatment.
